

Venezuela's Bolivarian Revolution - The 2nd decade Profile of a People's Movement

Friday

February 26, 7 p.m.

Koffler House, Room 108
(main auditorium)

569 Spadina Ave. (south of Harbord)

Federico Fuentes, Kiraz Janicke, activists living in Venezuela. Writers for Venezuelanalysis.com on tour of Canada from February 26 to March 7.

- During the eleven years since Hugo Chavez was elected as President of Venezuela, his country has become a focus of hope and controversy on a world scale. At the Copenhagen climate conference, Venezuela helped lead the countries calling for international social and ecological justice.
- Throughout these years, popular participation and control has been the strength and promise of Venezuela's Bolivarian revolution.
- Federico Fuentes and Kiraz Janicke, both well-known writers on Venezuela, will give a participant's report on the gains of grassroots movements and the challenges they face. They will also discuss the dangers that Venezuela faces against U.S. intervention.

And on Saturday, February 27 -- a day-long teach-in -- see over for details
